Contemporary design brought to life.

Destiny has been designed by legendary architect John Bingham, who has been involved with Raven Woods since the very beginning. It is the next Evolution of innovative architecture, and the most contemporary of any of the homes at Raven Woods to date.

Destiny's modern design will be punctuated by a distinct West Coast flair. Reminiscent of a glass house in the forest, Destiny mixes wood, stone and extensive sections of glass, allowing natural light to permeate the interiors.

Surrounded by a dramatic infinity-edge reflecting pond that cascades into a waterfall at the main lobby entry, Destiny has been designed to fit seamlessly into the forest and ocean environment for which the North Shore is so famous.

Interior design at one with the forest.

Look no further than Insight Design Group to incorporate clean lines and interesting materials to create modern, minimal interiors with an urban sensibility. Wood-grain cabinetry, stone counters, and stainless appliances are accented by frosted glass pantry doors.

Stylish, 4 and 5 piece bathrooms are your sanctuary – even in the 1 bedroom plans. High ceilings, spacious balconies and expansive windows create a sense of harmony with the natural setting outside.

Downtown style, only with more breathing room.

Destiny offers the clean, contemporary layout often found only in urban condominiums, while not compromising on square footage. The result? Homes made to live in, and patios or decks spacious enough to really enjoy. For example, one bedroom plans start from 653 square feet; two plus den homes from 1018 square feet. But don't just take our word for it, check out a selection of floorplans here.

Beauty, quality and function in every last detail.

Everything about the homes at Destiny, from the largest appliances to the smallest accents, has one singular purpose — to enhance the already splendid quality of life that the location itself provides. Each item listed below has been purposefully selected for its style and quality. Together, they add sophistication and comfort to each and every room.

General Overview:

Re-defining leisure activities

The North Shore combines peaceful community life with the amenities of a bustling metropolitan city. No other region in B.C. offers a better mix of natural and man-made leisure activities for people of all ages. As part of the Raven Woods community, Destiny residents get to enjoy all the benefits of North Shore living to the fullest.

Sporting paradise

Mt. Seymour is a year-round playground just waiting for you. Grab your snowboard and hit the terrain park during ski season. In the summer, take a mountain bike shuttle run down Seymour's CBC and Ned's trails, or go on a road ride from Deep Cove to Horseshoe Bay. And of course, you can always step right out your doorstep and hike to the peak of Seymour, or run the Baden Powell trail across three North Shore mountains in an extreme eco-challenge.

But there's a lot more than mountains here. Play a round or two at Northlands, launch your kayak or windsurfer from Cates Park, or lace 'em up and play some hockey at Ice Sports 4 Rinks, which is just a few minutes away.

More shopping, less driving

There's plenty of great shopping nearby at Lonsdale Quay and along Lonsdale Avenue. You're also just a short drive away from Park Royal — one of the Lower Mainland's premiere shopping destinations.

Social life central

There's nothing like having a lot of great pubs and restaurants right in the neighbourhood, and that's exactly what you'll enjoy at Destiny, beginning with the patio at Arm's Reach or lunch at the Turtle Lounge Bistro. The cinemas at Park and Tilford are also a great way to take a little break from your active lifestyle.

The arts live here

The North Shore is home to the Presentation House Gallery and the Deep Cove Stage Society. Capilano College also hosts student concerts and other musical performances.

Calculating true value

Today's new home buyer is shopping with location and price in mind, but smart shoppers also have their own personal checklist of all the extras that can make a new address their perfect home. This is where value comes in; it's the location and all the features they want for the money they are paying. And the value equation for real estate consists of all the benefits arising from ownership.

At Destiny, we look at value in terms of all that the buyer needs and wants for an exceptional price. For the cost of ownership, are we exceeding expectations on your personal checklist? Destiny offers contemporary architecture as part of a master community, but also offers all of the activities that the North Shore has to offer. All of this, and Destiny still is the best Price to Square Footage ratio within 20 minutes of downtown Vancouver. Go ahead, compare the average cost of a new home in key lower mainland communities. How much home are you getting for your dollar?

Over the next few weeks, we invite you to discover the value of living at Destiny. Create your own checklist within a price and location category and compare. We will provide you with all the tools to help you make your own calculations. And during the course of this, we're sure that you'll agree. You were meant to live here.

It's more than Destiny. It's part of a legacy.

Destiny at Raven Woods is brought to you by the Takaya Developments group of companies. Takaya has built nearly 800 homes in the Raven Woods Community over the past 15 years including the Silver Georgie Award-winning Seasons as well as Legends, Windsong, Deer Crest, and most recently The Signiture Estates. The Takaya partnership is comprised of the Tseil-Waututh First Nation, Sligo Holdings and NSI Strategic Investments.

When the Tseil-Waututh First Nation decided to transform the area into a truly exceptional residential community, it was integral that they preserved this natural setting. They turned to Sligo Holdings (part of the Kuok Group most notably known for developing The Palisades, The Residences on Georgia and managing part of the Shangri-La in Vancouver) and NSI Strategic Investments Ltd (Founded to create top-quality real estate developments in partnership with First Nations Bands).

Together, the partners that form Takaya Developments have realized their vision: to create homes of the highest quality and innovative design, surrounded by the protected forests and great amenities of the North Shore.

Club Destiny

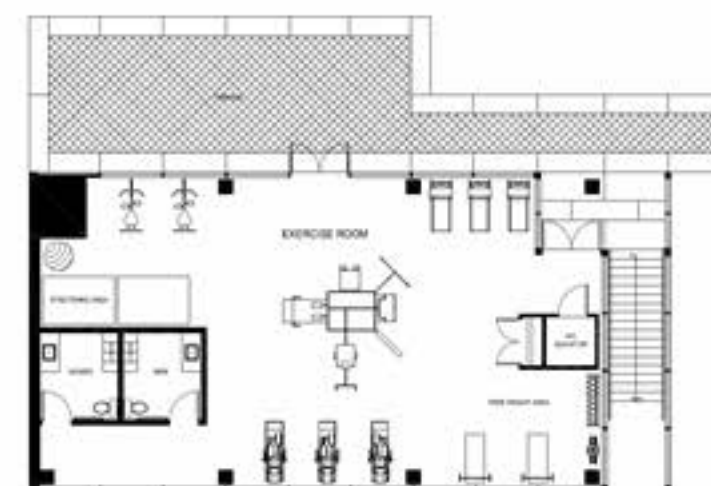

Destiny features amenities that exceed your expectations for training when the weather doesn't meet them. Throw the best party ever in the spacious party room, which includes a comfortable media room complete with state-of-the-art HD surround sound equipment, not to mention a wet bar and fridge.

If you need proof that Destiny was designed with active people in mind look no further than the spectacular workout room which has the space, equipment and amenities of an expensive health club — from its flat-screen TVs to floor-to-ceiling windows.

Few residential developments have transformed the north shore of Burrard Inlet quite like Raven Woods near North Vancouver's Cates Park.

Over the past decade-and-a-half, a stunning 800-household neighbourhood has matured at a measured pace of development above the park, the accomplishment of a partnership between the Tsleil-Waututh (People of the Inlet) First Nation, the Kuok Group, and an Asian investor, Loong Keng Lim.

While some investors have shied away from the leasehold agreements that purchasing a home on First Nations land entails, Raven Woods has proven itself not only as a wonderful place to live, but as a sound business investment.

The newest project — following quickly on the heels of the luxury-focused Seasons at Raven Woods — is Destiny at Raven Woods.

The first phase, which is now selling, is a five-storey wood-frame building consisting of 103 residences.

Roxanne Reid of Hestia Marketing says there has been very strong interest shown since Destiny was launched, with more than 30 homes sold in the first two weeks of sale.

First-time purchasers and empty-nesters are attracted to the value and, of course, the location. Not surprisingly, plenty of images in the sales literature feature trail runners, kayakers, and mountain bikers. Oh yes, and most of the models seem to be under 30, as well.

Of course, a lot of Lower Mainland real estate projects use helmeted mountain bikers and moss-draped trees to sell their homes. When I went out to check Destiny at Raven Woods last week, though, two couples came through the display suite doors at different times fresh off the hiking trails that run right through the development.

Destiny's design is consistent with the overall West Coast/First Nations-inspired theme already in existence at Raven Woods. Like all of the previous developments, Destiny was created by the architectural firm of Bingham+Hill, with interiors by Insight Design Group.

Reminiscent of a glass house in the forest, Destiny mixes wood, stone and extensive sections of glass, allowing natural light to flood through the living space.

Surrounded by a dramatic infinity-edge reflecting pond that cascades into a waterfall at the main lobby entry, Destiny has been designed to fit seamlessly into the forest and ocean environment for which the North Shore is so famous.

If all this sounds like it's more of a resort than a primary residence, then so be it. In fact, Destiny's range of amenities has even prompted movement within the Raven Woods community. Some of the buyers are even coming from within existing Raven Woods projects — trading up, in one case — to a new Destiny penthouse.

Jodi Vetterl runs a home-based business elsewhere in the neighbourhood, and purchased her original unit — a display suite, as it turns out — from investor Lim himself.

Vetterl grew up in Surrey and her work travels have taken her far from the Lower Mainland.

When she relocated from Toronto back to Vancouver in 2003, she was immediately drawn to living at Raven Woods.

“I was already driving there three or four times a week to get out in nature, I figured I might as well live there as well.”

She was also drawn by the dog-friendly nature of the buildings, since it's difficult to find properties that allow pets.

In fact, her new building will even feature a dog wash that will be good for hosing down muddy mountain bikes, too.

In keeping with the North Shore's recreational opportunities, each unit comes with its own bike locker and there are even a limited number of kayak lockers as well.

Vetterl's new Destiny home is a spacious, fifth-floor penthouse with airy 14-foot ceilings. An expansive balcony will overlook the infinity edge water feature that is the main design element of the courtyard.

Young buyers and empty-nesters will be attracted to Club Destiny - a two-storey showcase of “green roof” technology.

For active people, the Destiny fitness centre will include treadmills, stationary bikes, elliptical trainers and weights. A large patio, a media room and a party room are also planned.

All involved in Destiny are so confident of the value of the latest addition to the Raven Woods neighbourhood that they invite new-home shoppers to price-compare with other projects within a 20 minute commute of downtown Vancouver.

They have installed a nifty chart tool on the destinyliving.ca website that offers up comparisons between Destiny and other areas of the North Shore, Burnaby, Fairview Slopes and Kitisilano.

Ravens Wood resident Vetterl has purchased investment properties with other family members in other Raven Woods buildings and has been very happy with her returns on investment.

One home made a tidy 40-per-cent-plus profit in 18 months, she reports.

“I am thoroughly confident in the construction, building management, and the overall design here in Raven Woods,” she says. “I really feel it offers the best value on the North Shore.”
